Skit Activity

Communication/Personality Styles

20-30 minutes

In groups of three, write a skit in which you show how misunderstandings occur and are subsequently handled (many times causing conflicts and hurt feelings) when one is not aware of the different personality types that others bring to a conversation/work situation. Include at least two of the basic personality types in your skit participants.

Then, write the skit again, this time showing how the conflict/misunderstanding could have been avoided had the participants had an understanding of how the four basic personality types can interact successfully.

10 minutes

Be prepared to present the original skit to the class. Lead the class in its determination of the personality styles conveyed in the skit.

Then, present the revised version in which all misunderstandings have been avoided by using proper communication tools.
